

Silver opportunities

Not only for gold, but especially for silver, price gains are now possible

In the last few weeks, the silver price had to give way significantly, the low was at 18.12 U.S. dollars per troy ounce. Although the mark at 20.45 U.S. dollars was first a hurdle for the price of the precious metal, but then he could rise above it. Thus, the chances for a further price increase are not bad. The U.S. dollar is in a weak phase, also the interest rate expectations for the U.S. Federal Reserve have gone down. This is good for gold and silver. Precious metals, which are in demand for crisis and inflation protection, do not generate any returns, but this argument has become weaker as interest rate expectations have weakened. The price of gold is down about six percent in the second quarter of 2022, but compared to the previous quarter, it was up one percent. - <https://youtu.be/zGcphB1fiyE> - In the second quarter, China's no-longer-strict zero-covid policy had an impact.

Bar and coin sales, on the other hand, were stronger in Turkey, India and the Middle East in the second quarter of 2022, offsetting China's lower demand. Safe havens such as gold and silver should remain attractive as consumer prices remain high even as inflation slows. An end to the Ukraine-Russia war is also not in sight. And a further economic slowdown is possible, in Europe as well as in China and the United States. Equally possible is a further weakening in the stock market, just as a stagflationary or recessionary scenario should be good for gold and silver prices. So a closer look at well-positioned companies with silver in the bottom doesn't hurt.
