

Gold in focus

The safe haven gold is currently attracting a lot of investors, not only in precious metals trading.

German precious metal traders recorded a strong increase in sales of gold and also silver by private investors at the same time as the escalation of the Russia-Ukraine debacle. In some cases, ten times as much precious metal passed over the counter than usual. There were many new customers who bought for the first time, and often more was bought per customer on average than before. Pro Aurum in Munich sold around 40 percent more than in the weeks before. With the high gold price, there are of course also sellers who take profits. In any case, the safe haven gold is in demand as rarely. Who knows whether there won't be shortages in the area of physical precious metals?

Gold is not only suitable to stand up to inflation, but is now also in demand as asset protection, because it is a standard hedge that has always proven its worth. And especially now, when an economic slowdown due to the war should be factored in, at least to be on the safe side. Depending on how things go with Russia and Ukraine, gold could hit a new record high in price. How quickly it comes back to normal or an agreement, respectively, is written in the stars. Instead of investing in physical gold, an investment in gold companies comes into consideration, for example in Calibre Mining or Condor Gold.

A mid-sized and debt-free gold producer, Calibre Mining is focused on North and South America (Nicaragua, Washington, Nevada). The company also has development and exploration projects that will provide further value.

Condor Gold - <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kyIBHygyO-Q> - is looking after the La India gold project in Nicaragua, which has a very positive feasibility study.
