

Golden opportunities in Africa

Besides diamonds, crude oil, copper or coltan, gold is considered an important component of raw material extraction in Africa.

African countries have been the focus of mining companies and investors for some time. A senior international gold producer with three producing gold mines and a number of development and exploration projects is currently putting out feelers for gold in Zimbabwe. This is a company that expects to produce more than one million ounces of gold in 2021. The reason is the fascinating potential in the country, because Zimbabwe is geologically very interesting and that is exactly what the company is looking for. And Zimbabwe needs to revive its struggling economy. This requires new investments in the important mining sector.

Mining is not always easy in Zimbabwe. However, one mining company that has managed to secure the goodwill of local investors and is successfully producing gold is Caledonia Mining - <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=t6PFpRjvfTo> . With the Blanket mine there, Caledonia Mining also pays dividends. With the listing on the Victoria Falls Stock Exchange, the success can continue.

Not in Africa, but in Central America lies Nicaragua, a country whose most important export is gold. Economically and politically, not all is well either. And Nicaragua has no oil reserves like Venezuela, for example, whose socialist leadership in Caracas, however, dumbs down the country's oil wealth.

One gold company in Nicaragua is Condor Gold - <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=mFuZJgdUMh0> -. Three gold projects are in Condor Gold's portfolio. For the particularly significant La India gold project, the company had announced the submission of a pre-feasibility study in late October. In the first two years, an average of 157,000 ounces of gold per year are expected to see the light of day there.
